UK GAMES JOBS SUMMARY

MARCH 2023

Welcome to the March 2023 jobs report. There has been another decrease of over 200 open positions compared to last month, marking the lowest number of jobs in the industry since these reports began.

The number of indie roles has increased again, and a new studio has added over 20 new roles this month.

We have once again added 5 new companies to our database this month.

Since collating the data we've seen big news with tax relief changes and Creative Assembly's North studio so we'll keep a weather eye on how they impact things going forward.

All but one of the largest hubs had a significant reduction in roles, with one city in particular having under half of the number of available jobs as last month.

There was a steep decrease in Code roles, and a large increase in Design roles.

INSIGHTS

Two major international companies have removed the vast majority of their job openings in the UK this month following the global tech downturn as seen in recent headlines..

While Indie studios continue to add new jobs as we have seen over the past few months, the number of Mobile opportunities and Junior level roles have severely decreased in proportion to the overall reduction in open jobs.
